The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes Adventure IV – The Red-Headed League

He'd copied page after page after page,
The pawnbroker complained in a rage,
 It was not a good deal –
 His own kneecaps were real –
He'd been snookered -- a man of his age!

Sandy Kozinn

Wilson had a pate of bright red
Which bad guys exploited, Sherlock said
 He took the villains' hook
 And he copied a book
Could Holmes be partial to a red head?

Karen Olson

When two men planned to rob a big ban
Through a tunnel that was very dank
 Holmes foiled the plot
 As both men he caught
While protecting the bank's last French franc.

Bill Dorn

Several clues led Holmes to the suspect dear
Dirty trousers and a rare pierced ear
 A Potter-forehead scar
 Let John Clay be the star
A hollow sidewalk made the tale clear
