

LIMERICKS

The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes Adventure XI – The Adventure of the Engineer's Thumb

Victor Hatherley, he needed some Remuneration, but he was so dumb
 That he failed to get out
 Till attacked by a lout
And had to come home sans a thumb.

Sandy Kozinn

Villains had a press where coin was made
But the press broke down, so they had to trade
 Thus, an engineer was promised a fee
 But he lost his thumb while trying to flee
So, Holmes got him a large band-aid

Karen Olson

Young Hatherley had lost his thumb,
And needed a large drink of rum;
 With one vicious chop,
 The axe Stark did drop,
Which left the poor engineer numb

Bill Dorn

Hatherly hired to check a press
Fuller's earth leads him to a scam guess
 A cleaver takes his thumb
 Brandy is used, not rum
A house fire, any clues does repress

Steve Mason

