

LIMERICKS

The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes Adventure XVII – The Adventure of Yellow Face

Li'l Lucy wore a mask that was yellow.
It concealed her black face very well. Oh,
    How she did smile
    When it took just a while
Till Munro proved a very fine fellow.

Sandy Kozinn

The Munros life in Norbury was good
Until Munro didn't know where he stood
    Because Effie began visiting a nearby home
    Munro thought she started to roam
But the face at the window was her brood

Karen Olson

She hid behind a yellow face;
It was to disguise her black race,
    When at last he did know,
    Effie's man Grant Munro,
Accepted her with smiling grace.

Bill Dorn

Holmes deducts much from an amber pipe
Not often, he buys the client's hype
    A child behind a mask
    The wife takes him to task
And teaches beware stereotype

Steve Mason

