

I only quote
this as a trivial
example of observation
and inference.

The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes

Adventure LX – The Adventure of Shoscombe Old Place

1. “But you do occasionally find a carrion crow among the eagles. Let us for a moment argue upon this supposition.”
2. “Dogs don't make mistakes.”
3. “In any case, my business is that of every other good citizen- to uphold the law. It seems to me that you have much to answer for.”
4. “It was my duty to bring the facts to light, and there I must leave it. As to the morality or decency of your conduct, it is not for me to express an opinion.”
5. “Things seem to be of a curiously mixed character. But that should surely help us. It is only the colourless, uneventful case which is hopeless.”

